Description	In 1949, Albers began his series 'Homage to the Square', whose numerous variations are based on the interactions between the colours and differently sized squares. Albers often based the titles on natural moods. According to Margit Weinberg-Staber, he considered grey to be the most beautiful colour. By using the word 'question' in the title, Albers presumably refers to the suspended state of the inner grey square in relation to the outer one.

Due to the time-consuming nature of comprehensive scientific research on each individual artwork, we have decided to disclose some works also without provenance information to the public. The progression of provenance research will be continuously updated online. If
